

It's easy to click

It's easy to click when you're browsing
As nobody knows who you are.
The world is right there to discover
So funny and cool and bizarre.

But you click on a link and it opens
A picture you wish wasn't there
And now you can't seem to delete it.
You're not in charge, it's just not fair.

If anything gives you that feeling
In your stomach that something is wrong
Then don't be afraid, tell your parents.
To tell the truth shows that you're strong.

I know that you think they'll be angry
I know that you're scared they'll be mad
But they'll be so glad that you told them
About something which you knew was bad.

Gillian Craig

Poems

